Standards

Standards facilitate our daily routine and life in many areas. Standards ensure that these systems are brought together, which is just what the ISO 9001 standard does.

The ISO 9001:2015 quality management system is your leadership and guidance system and has successfully established itself on a global basis. It is applicable not only to organisations manufacturing products but also to those providing services. There are good reasons for introducing it, such as systematic customer focus, process-driven approaches with continuous improvement, structure and transparency. And also because it is more cost-effective for your organisation to avoid mistakes rather than pay dearly for them in the end.

Risk-based management helps prevent hazards and enables good use to be made of opportunities.
